

Dear FCC Commissioners & Staff:

This ruling is totally against all what America stands for. The Internet was born on the free exchange of information. ISP's had made it possible for the consumer to be able to use this information and NOT the telephone companies. In fact in 1992 the Chairman of AT&T said that the Internet will never be a means of information for the public.

Now as a ISP we pay taxes on each and every phone number we use for the customer to be able to surf the net. Plus the consumer pays a tax on his DSL, phone, or Cable Internet connection.

The FCC should look at the phone companies. They are the ones who don't give the consumer what they deserve. The phone companies are making to much money now.

This ruling is a bad idea. We will fight against this ruling on a national basis.

Sincerely,

Joe Uhrmacher
